Voters approve water plant, library hookup; reject condo proposal

by Arlene Surprenant
Though there were few surprises in a lengthy town meeting that went into the wee hours last Saturday, a majority of the 293 voters present gave a nod of approval to the town library hookup to the Merrimack Valley Library Consortium after an unexpected $82,000 in state funds was found.

Articles also passed included a proposed water treatment plant in North Wilmington, an article to extend the jurisdiction of the Wilmington Redevelopment Authority (WRA), a proposal to study alternate means of receiving electric power, establishment of a Handicapped Commission, approval of a new 100 foot ladder truck, and several capital outlay items requested by the School Department. All told, 25 articles were passed.

Articles which drew fire and went down in defeat were a proposal to rezone 53 acres off Burlington Avenue for the town's first condominiums, a zoning bylaw amendment to delete PRD districts, a plan to turn over the South School to the Wilmington Housing Authority for Chap. 705 housing, and two official map cases.

A three year moratorium passed at a special town meeting on the same day caused voters to pass over 15 town-owned land sales on the warrant. Another six articles, including one asking for $39,000 received earlier as a budget line item for the Buzzell School renovation, were also passed over with Carl Backman's article, proposing to auction town land once the moratorium is lifted, withdrawn for further study.

The unanimous vote for the library computer networking system came after Town meeting to find the necessary $80,000 to participate in the consortium.

Several residents agreed with George Allan's observation that, had voters known such funds were available, they might not have had to economize so stringently on previous items. One citizen accused several boards of "playing games" with available funding, while Atty. James Banda asked voters not to penalize the library for the confusion as the whole town will benefit from the consortium tie-in.

With the computer system a reality, residents will soon have access to one million books and will see improvement in many areas of library service.

In an overwhelming 147 to four vote taken after midnight, residents nixed builder James DeCarolis' plan to rezone land off Burlington Avenue to PRD status to allow for a 98 unit condominium development known as Charles Place.

Those opposed cited wetland disturbance and traffic congestion as reasons for shooting down Article 38.

Alan Michel, of Burlington Avenue, strongly disagreed with DeCarolis' view on this being the most effective use of the site.

"This is a totally inappropriate use for this land," he stated, displaying several photos of wet areas on supposedly dry portions to prove his point.

Even with the added at-Manager Buzz Stapczynski agreed to reroute additional reimbursement funds for the high school renovation project to the consortium.

The $82,000 amount is a result of House Bill 5007 which should be available sometime in July. If it's not forthcoming, Stapczynski said, voters will have to come back to a special town meeting to find the necessary $80,000 to participate in the consortium.

tration of sewers constructed at DeCarolis' own expense and a conviction on DeCarolis' part that condos are "spreading like wildfire" proving there is a need for them, voters remained unconvinced. Instead, they went along with John Forrest's cry that "we don't want to see condos in this town; let's keep them out."

In contrast to this view, however, voters had earlier in the meeting voted 202 to 59 to keep PRD zoning on the books. Both Planning Board Chairman Tony Gentile and Selectman Rocco DePasquale argued in favor of PRD zoning, which originally became a bylaw after an intensive year long study.

Gentile pointed out that the bylaw is very restrictive and not many developments will be able to get past the "stringent" rules of the bylaw.

"I think, in the proper setting, PRD can be a good thing for this town," he said.

DePasquale explained that with the elimination of PRD, Wilmington would be known as an "exclusionary community." This would have an adverse effect on forthcoming state or federal funds.

Stu Neilson stressed that without alternate housing, the federal housing board will "push things down your throat" and the PRD zone is "an effective weapon" to stop such building.

Petitioner Bob Fasulo, who placed Article 36 on the warrant primarily to give voters a second chance at PRD districts, asked that Wilmington "be a leader."

He had hoped Wilmington would eliminate PRD zoning to avoid the problems other towns have had with condo or townhouse style developments, something voters didn't see fit to do at this time.

Despite a possible 70 percent increase in resident water rates should Article 19 pass, voters agreed 203 to 5 to fund a new water treatment plant, similar to that at Butters Row, to improve the quality of North Wilmington water.

Besides treating wells on Salem Street, Barrows Street, and Brown's Crossing, the plant will also remove "volatile organics" or contaminants, should that become necessary, said Water and Sewer Commission Chairman George Allan.

Part of the $6.4 million cost will come from bonds and federal funds and part from an expected state grant. $2.7 million in state aid is available, said Allan, though there is no guarantee it will be forthcoming.

"The days of cheap water are over," Allan said.

When Fincom member James Carroll asked how long residents would have to continue paying a 70 percent increase in their rates, Allan speculated on 15 years or the life of the bond issue.

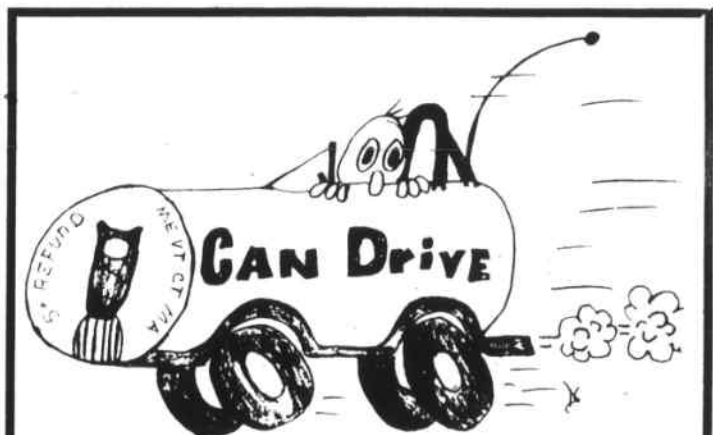

With the unanimous town meeting decision to allow the Redevelopment Authority broader power, through Article 24, members will now seek to establish a CARD district at the town center.

WRA members also look forward to working with the Planning Board in setting up guidelines for town center improvements. They expect to represent the town in relocating business displaced during the state's Route 129 improvement project and hope to turn their attention to relieving traffic problems in Wilmington from the Woburn and Reading townlines to the Tewksbury line.

Condos blocked

Among the people opposed to condominiums on the old Roberts estate was Alan Michel of Burlington Avenue. He came to the meeting with photographs of wet areas on the proposed site. Article 38, the proposal for condos, lost overwhelmingly.

Chemical People meet May 6

Would you like to make a difference? Would you like to contribute to a drug-free environment for your children? Would you like to get involved with drug prevention before your children get involved with drugs?

If so, plan to be present at a special Drug Buster follow-up meeting. The meeting will be held in the upper conference room at the Regional Health Center on Monday, May 6 at 7:30 p.m.

Sponsored by the Wilmington Chemical People, the meeting will encourage audience input on the types of drug and alcohol prevention programs residents would like to see in Wilmington. Members of the Governor's Alliance Against Drugs, the Wilmington School Committee, and the Chief of Police have been invited to attend.

Reading Light files new rates

The Reading Municipal Light Dept. (RMLD) recently filed new rate schedules with the Mass. Dept. of Public Utilities (DPU) to be effective on all billings on or after June 1.

According to a press release by RMLD, the major emphasis in the rate filing is to control peak demand and to encourage the conservation of energy. This was done by increasing the demand and energy charges during the months of June, July, August and September, when the RMLD system experiences its peak demand. Also, a customer charge has been added to the residential and small general service schedule.

The rate increase is designed to produce $2,457,986 in added revenue during the balance of 1985. Expenses are expected to increase $3,789,062 in 1985. The differences between the expenses and added revenue will be produced by the projected five percent increase in sales.

The details of the rate changes are as follows:

Residential (A) rates

There will be a customer charge replacing the minimum charge. This charge will be $2.22 per month, which comes to $2.00 after discount for payment within 10 days.

During the months of June, July, August and September, RMLD will add 1.34 cents (1.2 cents after discount) to every kilowatt hour (kwh) over 250, except where the customer has a controlled electric water heater. The 1.34 cent surcharge then applies to all kwh over 750.

The cost per kwh for the 500 kwh water heater block is going down to 3.34 cents from 3.76. If the customer used the full 500 kwh, the savings would net out to $1.89, almost fully offsetting the new $2 customer charge.

RMLD is offering a new rate for service during the hours of 10 p.m. to 8 a.m. through a separate meter which will be at 2.78 cents per kwh (2.5 cents after discount.)

Small general service (B) rates

There will be a $2.22 ($2 after discount) per month customer charge replacing the minimum charge. RMLD will add 1.34 cents to each kwh after 500 during the months of June, July, August and September.

Large general service (C) rates

The demand charge will be increased only during the months of June, July, August and September. The new rates for those months will be $8.07 per kva ($7.26 after discount) in place of the current range of $2.883 to $2.26 per kva.

Street lighting (D) rates

There will be no changes in the rate schedules. A 50-watt high pressure sodium lamp has been added, and RMLD will only install sodium fixtures from now on.

Fuel charge

Substantial reductions are taking place in this area. RMLD is now billing 3.1 cents compared to 4.5 cents at the same time last year. RMLD is hoping for even lower charges this summer. These lower fuel charges will more than offset the increased basic rates this year. The average basic rates will go up by 0.5 cents, and the fuel charges will be down at least one cent per kwh, a net savings of 0.5 cents per kwh.

The legal advertising for the new rates appears on Page S-13 of this paper.

The Devil Made Us Do It

We only wanted to have a peek.
At the most talked about house on Livingston Street.
We couldn't drive by, so we decided to walk
I guess we were curious, because of all the talk.
So walk we did, to get to the house.
But nothing was stirring, not even a mouse.
We stood for a while and gazed at the sight
When low and behold, we did see a light.
It was blue in color and flashing around.
We ran so fast our feet never touched the ground.
We ran to the car and got there to find,
Our being nosey had just cost us a fine
A no parking fine would normally be ten.
But the chief was so mad, he said "sock it to 'em."
So it cost us fifteen just to have a peek
At the most talked about house on Livingston Street.

Voters refuse school budget increase

Wilmington voters rejected a plea for increased school funds Saturday afternoon, and refused a $340,000 increase requested by the Wilmington School Committee. The vote came late in the afternoon and late in the budget, and left school officials with some drastic cuts to make, with as many as 15 teachers' jobs on the line.

The school committee had requested a budget of $9,838,412, and had submitted a preliminary budget before the first of the year. But the finalized budget was not submitted to the Wilmington Finance Committee in time for the fincom budget hearing on April 2. Without the finalized budget, the fincom voted to approve a budget of $9,498,412.

School committeeman Robert Peterson moved to amend the budget to the higher figure, arguing that if the schools had to live within Prop. 2 1/2, then everybody should do it. He cited percentages of increases in other departments' budgets higher than the increase in the school budget.

Fincom Chairman Dennis Volpe took the position that the school committee "had not had its act together," and had come into the town meeting asking for an eleventh hour increase.

Voters also rejected a request for an increase in the Shawsheen Tech budget. A motion to amend the $605,281 amount to $625,000 failed, 68 to 122. Before the meeting broke for supper, though, representatives of the Tech school committee gave notice of their intent to have the article reconsidered.

After the meeting had reconvened, the article came up for reconsideration. Newly elected committeeman Kevin Sowryda said that cuts in state aid "are going to kill us." He also said that Tech gives as well as takes, pointing out the work being done on the Buzzell School. Tech students are helping the Wilmington Council on Aging convert that building into a drop-in center for senior citizens. Reconsideration failed 98 to 102.

Additional funding for the renovations at the Buzzell School were voted, though, on an amendment to increase the line item for that under the Council on Aging budget. The fincom had recommended a figure of $15,000, but Jim Stewart, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, moved to amend this to $39,000, the amount requested for the same purpose in Article 27. The increased figure was voted, and Article 27 was later passed over.

Another $1500 was added to the Council on Aging budget on a motion by Wilson Belbin, who asked for the money to increase the pay of the director.

With the fincom asking for fiscal restraint, State Rep. Jim Miceli asked why the savings were always made on the $15,000 salaries, not the $40,000 ones. The raise passed, 163 to 94.

South Street is an extremely narrow, heavily traveled street that is in disrepair. Houses in this area are closely located, closer than in any other part of the town.

During the summer we face terrible water shortages. In addition most of us have some type of basement water problem already. The building of such a unit, with parking for 60 cars, would only aggravate existing problems.

Of further concern to us are the many children who board school buses on the corner of Benson Road and South Street. Increased traffic will cause increased risks. Furthermore, the natural environment we have here will be altered. Trees cut and wetlands harmed or destroyed and for what!! The almighty dollar.

It is clear that passage of Article 46 will benefit no one but the developer. Homeowners, children, pedestrians and the environment will lose out.

There is hope however. If we can get enough people to vote against Article 46 at town meeting, May 6, we can preserve our neighborhood.

Sincerely,
Concerned Residents of Benson Road

Dear Larz:

Where were you Larry Juergens? Saturday night, April 27, when the Wilmington Town Meeting reconvened the Shawsheen Tech budget was brought before the town for reconsideration. You are a Shawsheen Tech School Committee member. If you do not care what happens to the school you represent, why should anyone else? Why were you not there to vote for reconsideration? Why did you leave the entire presentation to a young man, Kevin Sowryda, who has only been a School Committee member for one week. Kevin did an excellent job, but you Larry, as a senior member with two years experience on the board, should have been there. I know you were there at 8 p.m. When the budget was to be reconsidered you were gone. Your place was at Town Meeting, not the junior prom or anywhere else.

I am one irate parent! Larry, you ran for this board and were elected. I expect you to represent Shawsheen Tech to your fullest ability!!

I hope next year at voting time the people of Wilmington will vote wisely, and vote for a candidate who will represent their office with good conscience.

Sincerely,
Maureen Sutton

Dear Larz:

Where did Shawsheen Tech School Committee member Larry Juergens go Saturday evening?

I always thought Wilmington had two representatives on the Shawsheen Tech School Committee.

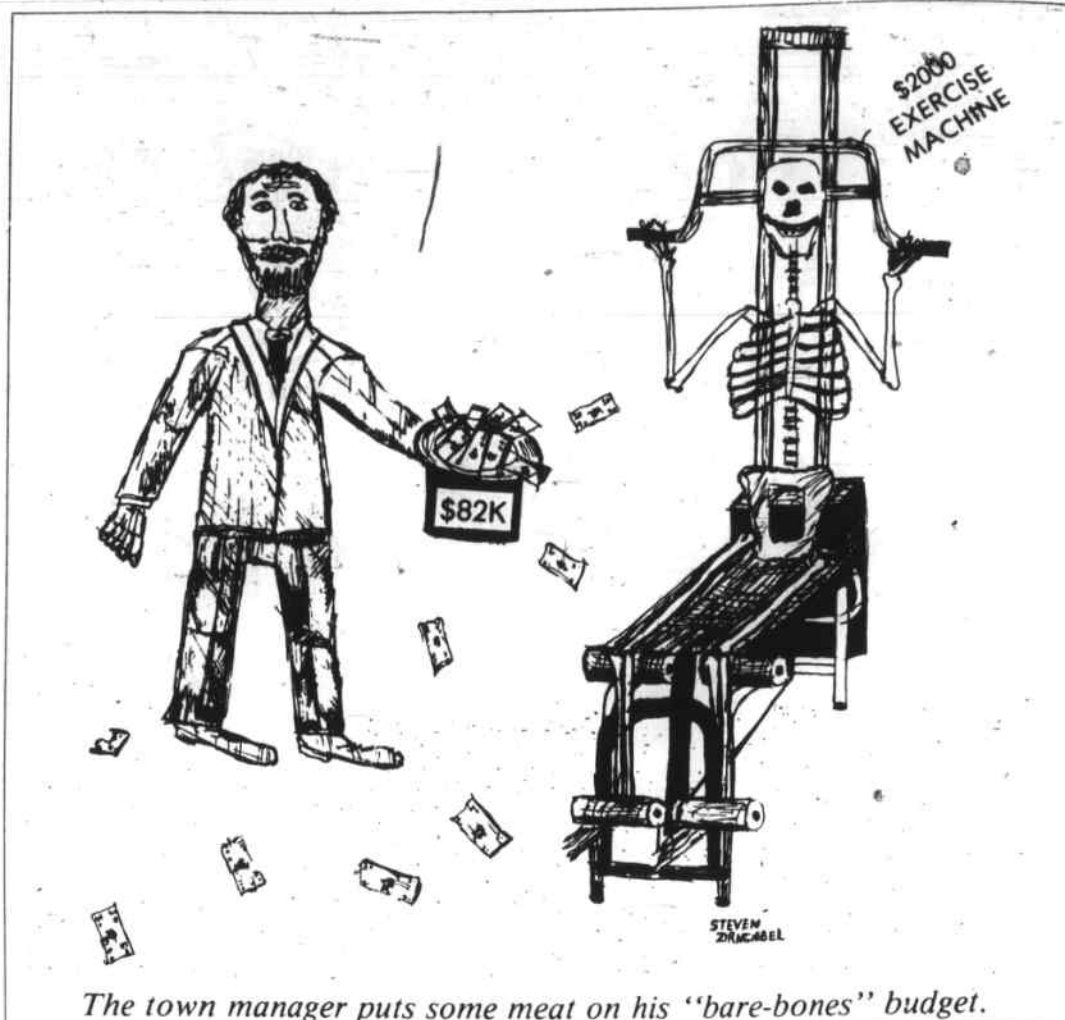

Why did he disappear minutes before the Tech budget was to be reconsidered at our town meeting?

Was the reason that drew him away from the town meeting a heavy date, or maybe the Tech junior prom? Anyway Larry was nowhere to be found when the reconsideration was brought up. This left a newly elected Kevin Sowryda to carry the whole load.

I do not think I am wrong in expecting our elected officials to do a good job. I also do not feel this was a fair way to treat our Wilmington Tech families.

There will be many questions from these families on why we lost both votes on the Tech budget. Will Larry be able to explain why? I don't think so.

Sincerely,
Peggy Power

Stress management course at Regional Health Center

Workshops designed to teach positive ways of handling stress will be held during the month of May by Wilmington's Regional Health Center.

Everyone today in our modern, hectic world is under a certain amount of stress, Health Center representatives say. Though stress is positive and negative, constant stress is hazardous to one's health.

As the stress level increases, so does the blood sugar level, heart rate, blood pressure and respiration rate. Because of the adverse reactions of stress on the body, it is important to develop skills and learn new techniques for managing stress.

The Regional Health Center in Wilmington's Community Health Education department will conduct a workshop on "Managing Your stress" on Thursdays, May 9, 16, 23 and 30 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Included in this four-session workshop will be effects, symptoms and causes of stress, including an exercise to assess one's own stress level; the "Type A" personality; and various methods to reduce stress including: exercise, relaxation, assertiveness and many others. A relaxation training tape and a packet of materials will be included in the course. The course is limited to 15 participants. To pre-register, call 657-3910, ext. 567.

They made her an offer she couldn't refuse

by Arlene Surprenant
Dr. Carol Sager, whose position as Wilmington School Superintendent terminates in June, will be starting as new job as superintendent of the Highland Park School district in Illinois July 1. The reportedly wealthy district contains three schools — two elementary and one middle school — encompassing grades K-eight.

According to Sager, she landed her new post through an executive search conducted by Harold Webb Associates.

Representatives from the Illinois school district paid a two day visit to Wilmington on March 14 to interview Sager and various members of the community on her application. Though they notified her March 24 of her acceptance, it wasn't until after a five day trip to Illinois in April that she accepted.

"They made me an offer I couldn't refuse," she laughed, hinting that her salary will be close to that of top educators in Massachusetts. And, she added, the position with the Highland Park district is considered "one of the major superintendencies in the country."

Sager had sought superintendent jobs in Massachusetts and New York, as well, and wound up as a finalist in each case. She had also applied for employment in one or two other areas which she declined to name.

While Sager proclaims herself "delighted and enthusiastic" about the way things have turned out, she stressed she will miss all her colleagues and the people of Wilmington.

"You can't be involved with a community without feeling strong ties and commitment to the town and its people," she said. "You don't sever ties. You take them along with you," she added.

Sager has been a part of the Wilmington school system for the past 13 years. Though she and school board members have not always seen eye to eye, she claims she has always made any decisions for the good of the students. She has also striven for a measure of respect, which she seems to have achieved.

As one parent said, "I may not always have agreed with her 100 percent, but I have always respected her 100 percent."

In her 13 years here, Sager has held positions as Director of Reading, Title I Project Director, Assistant Superintendent, and Superintendent.

During that time, she helped raise reading scores, guided the writing of nationally acclaimed curriculum guides, and increased funding for the Title I program. She also helped bring about the "sorely needed" renovation of Wilmington High, helped create and implement a "model" school drug policy, had a hand in hiring a strong high school principal, and overall, helped improve the quality of services offered to students.

Though Prop 2½ "devastated" the system, causing the closing of five school buildings and the laying off of 115 staff personnel in her first years as superintendent, Sager played a leading role in consolidating programs and helping the system grow.

She also served on several boards and been the recipient of many honors, awards and citations.

"Some of my kudos have to be shared with the whole town," Sager said, explaining that she was merely a representative for the school community in Wilmington.

Her broad educational background speaks for itself. Sager holds a B.A. in Russian Languages from Barnard College in New York, a Masters Degree in Education from Framingham State and a Doctorate from Boston College.

While advancing her career through higher education, Sager points out she was guided by Louis Pasteur's famous axiom, "Chance favors the prepared mind."

In reminiscing over the past years, Sager said, "Basically, I've accomplished what I set out to do. Now it's time for a new challenge." In the future, she hopes to get more of a chance to use her skills in curriculum planning and staff development.

Housing authority seeks volunteer advisors

Lillian Buckley, Executive Director of the Wilmington Housing Authority (WHA), is seeking residents who would like to be part of a Citizens Advisory Committee.

The committee would act in an advisory capacity to the WHA board to ensure that the new Chapter 667 for elderly housing and Chapter 705 for low to moderate income housing would be "developed in a manner that is sensitive to community concerns," Buckley said.

Residents eligible to join the committee would be Deming Way tenants, public officials, abutters, representatives from neighborhood organizations and anyone with a knowledge of construction or a desire to give input.

Once formed, the committee would meet periodically with the WHA board to "give feedback on the ways the community will be affected by decisions," she said.

According to Buckley, the new housing is progressing on schedule. Work is now in the initial planning stage as deep pit tests on all ten Chapter 705 sites are scheduled for May 6, followed by further survey work.

The WHA is presently awaiting an engineer's report on the Chapter 667 units. In each case, the work is being carried out by Anderson Engineers of North Reading, said Buckley.

Following preliminary design and local and state approval in the initial planning stage, the work will move into the final planning stage which includes design, contract documents, bidding, construction and management planning.

The Silver Lake Spotlighters held their final event in Wilmington on Saturday, a car wash at the former Whitefield School. Originally founded as the Wilmington Spotlighters, the theater group had existed for many years in borrowed or leased facilities. Recently, they signed a ten-year lease for a building in Woburn, and now they have moved. Wiping the windshield on a customer's vehicle is Adrienne Bonaccorsi.

Wilmington police news

During the week ending April 30, Wilmington police officers responded to nine accidents, 14 alarms, 10 disturbances, five break and entries, made 30 arrests and 14 protective custody detentions.

Three larcenies were reported, medical assistance was given, three incidents of suspicious activity were investigated, one domestic problem was quieted and four threat complaints were logged.

Five trailbike complaints and five involving traffic were checked out, three stolen vehicles were recovered and five incidents of vandalism are under investigation.

Arrests

Early Thursday morning Officers Steve LaRivee and Jim White arrested Anthony Papa, 19 of Bellflower Road, Billerica and charged him with several motor vehicle offenses including speeding and operating without a valid driver's license.

Another Billerica man was arrested Friday morning by Officers Steve Mauriello and Jim White. Joseph Sargent of Shawsheen Avenue, Billerica, 27, was charged with operating a motor vehicle after revocation of his driver's license.

Trail bikes: In recent days the police station has been inundated with complaints about trailbikes, three wheelers, etc., causing disturbances and destruction all over town. Young people apparently think they can ride them anywhere with disregard for everyone else's rights, police say. They request that parents of youths who ride trailbikes take the time to find out where the bikes are being ridden.

One of the biggest problem areas is the pits in North Wilmington, both Cronin's and Benevento's. This area is off limit for trailbikes, and the department is prosecuting offenders.

The Chemical People meeting will be held Monday, May 6 at the Regional Health Center. Any interested parents and/or residents are invited to attend this regular meeting. Emphasis of this group is placed on drug awareness in the community especially with the youth problems caused by drug and alcohol abuse.

Scholarship established in memory of Lisa Jackson

A scholarship fund has been established to honor the memory of a young woman from Wilmington who died in an automobile accident on March 6. Lisa Jackson was a graduate of Shawsheen Tech. and was employed at Wang Laboratories at the time of her death. The accident took place in Tewksbury.

The scholarship fund was established by her mother's co-workers. Mrs. Katherine Jackson works at Analog Devices on Woburn Street, Wilmington. The scholarship will benefit a graduating senior of Shawsheen Tech.

Lisa, who was 22, was involved in several charities, and sponsored a child in Thailand. She was also a well-accomplished photographer.

Americans met Russians as WWII drew to a close

Many people today cannot remember the days 40 years ago when World War II was drawing to a close in Europe.

In the last week in April, 1945, British troops were fighting their way into northern Germany, and US troops were fighting their way into Czechoslovakia and southern Germany. To the eastward the Russian armies were rolling across eastern Germany.

Hitlerite Germany was being chopped into pieces. It was just a matter of time, when the US and the Russian armies were to meet.

Eisenhower, the overall commanding general, worried lest there be clashes between Russians and Americans, each side thinking the other was Nazis. Caution and care was the word, in the US Third Army, nearest to the Russians.

The story has been told in the national press in the last week, how patrols from the Third Army reached the Elbe River, and joined up with patrols from the Russian armies. Three different US patrols achieved this, according to those stories.

All were from the US 69th Division, US Third Army.

Ted Norton, of Wildwood Street in Wilmington was serving in the 272nd Infantry Regiment, of the 69th Division.

Torgau, a town on the Elbe River, is the place which is celebrated as being where the Russian and US soldiers met. Ted never got quite that far.

Most of the men in the regiment in which he served got as far as a town named Mockrehna, a place about 10 miles west of Torgau. And Ted Norton saw plenty of Russian troops, in and around that town. Once contact had been established everyone was friendly.

Ted Norton in 1944

Norton was an electrician. He knew his business. Before he volunteered for the US Army he had been working for four years as an electrician in the x-ray and radiation laboratories of M.I.T.

Whenever the battalion in which he served moved to new headquarters it was Norton's job to see that there was electricity available for the headquarters company.

He and another enlisted man had to provide electricity for the house where the colonel had his headquarters. Generally they were able to get power from the town or city nearby. Sometimes they had to use a portable power unit, which was carried with them on a trailer.

At Mockrehna there was electricity available. But next day it went out. Norton and his buddy hooked up the generator, and then, with power in the colonel's office, they were off to find what had happened to the town's power supply.

At the edge of the town they found a small building with high tension wires leading to it. It had to be a transformer. The problem was probably inside that building.

The other man shot off the lock from the door. Before they could open it, liquid began to run out, from under the door.

Was it water? No, it was oil.

Norton's buddy had just shot the only transformer in town. It would be a long time before there would be electrical service in Mockrehna.

The regiment pulled out after only three days in Mockrehna. It pulled to the westward.

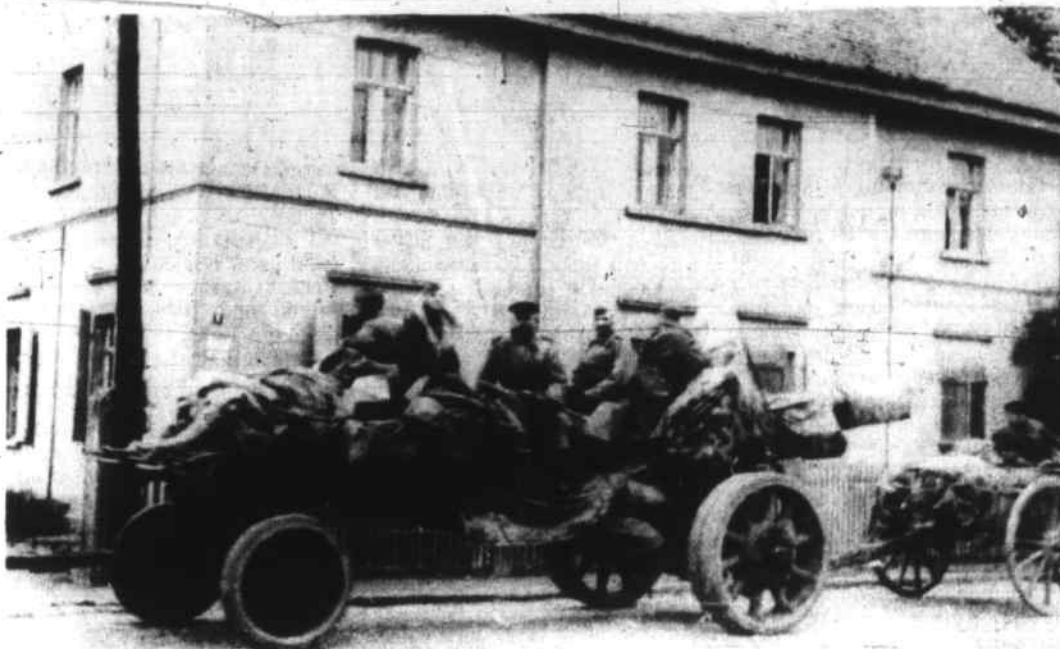

But Norton did get some pictures of the Russian army, and the soldiers with that army.

The shooting of the transformer was not, however, the highlight of Norton's army career, bizarre as it was.

A couple of months later Norton was in Stuttgart, Germany. Hardly anything was in working order, as yet. This included the telephone system. It could take a week to make a telephone call across town.

One day, at the headquarters Norton was called to the phone. The man at the other end was his brother-in-law, the captain of an American troopship. His brother-in-law was in LeHavre, France, several hundred miles away. It was, for Norton, a pleasant surprise.

But he could never understand how a call could be made over hundreds of miles of wire, when it was impossible to put in a call to a place only 10 miles away. That, for him, was and is, one of the mysteries of the US Army.

Russian troops arriving in Germany from the east were poorly equipped. What few motor vehicles were available were quite old.

Vehicles of any sort were used by the Russians, including tractors. The building in the background served as the American headquarters during the brief stay in Mockrehna.

The village sign at Mockrehna

Many of the Russians were traveling in horse-drawn wagons.

These pictures of the Russian troops arriving were taken by Ted Norton, who happened to have a 35mm camera and film available. He said he just guessed at the settings.

Mr. Warmth
Wilmington Town Moderator Michael Cairra is well-known for his speaking abilities. He also has a very sharp wit, which he uses on town officials at the annual Chamber of Commerce introduction party.

Officials bask in warmth of Chamber of Commerce roast

"The purpose of this is to introduce the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce folks to the town officials. Now if that isn't an example of redundancy, nothing is," said Michael Cairra. "If you look around, most of the members of the Chamber of Commerce are the town officials."

The occasion was a wine and cheese party, held on Thursday after election, sponsored by the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce. This year, it was held at Heritage Commons, a new office complex on Middlesex Avenue, developed by the Northeastern Development Corp., Joseph Langone and Richard Stuart.

The annual event has become a roast. Cairra, the town moderator, does the honors, applying his wit to the personalities in attendance. This year, he admitted that it was getting harder to come up with new material for the same audience. But his style was nonetheless sharp.

Few persons were spared. Introducing Jim Miceli, Cairra called him "a self-made man, thus saving God that awesome responsibility."

Undertaker Millie Cavanaugh made the mistake of arriving late. She was introduced as "the late Millie Cavanaugh."

Redevelopment Authority Chairman Jay Donovan, who ran unsuccessfully for selectman a few years ago, "finally learned that he has to run for a lesser office in order to get elected."

Donovan responded that he really respected Cairra's political strategy. It was the first time anybody running in Wilmington actually stayed in Phoenix until the ballots were counted, he said. Cairra, who was unopposed in the election, had just returned from Arizona the day of the party.

Other digs: "My good friend Carole Hamilton is here. Carol is the same voice on the planning board."

"Danny Stewart is here from the Hazardous Waste Committee. There's one of your exciting committees. Dan, you're doing a fine job. Have you met yet?"

"Yes," replied Stewart. "How many times?" asked Cairra.

"None," said Stewart.

From the school committee, Anthony Accardi — "Tony, are you going to be the new chairman? Have you got your votes lined up yet? Tony, talk to Bobby Cain. He knows how to do it."

Cain last year sought to chair the Board of Selectmen, but lost out to Jimmy Stewart.

Christoffels sparks Redmen past Lawrence

The Tewksbury High School boys' varsity track and field team evened its' team record at 2-2 Wednesday as they were able to come from behind and defeat Lawrence, 78 1/2-66 1/2. Saturday the Redmen had a respectable showing in the Class B State Coaches Relays.

Tewksbury 78 1/2 Lawrence 66 1/2. Mark Christoffels continued to be a key to the Redmen success this season, as his first place finish along with teammate Kenn Coviello's second place in the 220 yard run, allowed Tewksbury to defeat Lawrence before the mile relay. This one-two finish gave Tewksbury 73 1/2 points, one-half point more than the 73 points necessary to win the meet.

Adding icing to the cake was a come-from-behind finish in the mile relay, adding another five points to the Redmen total, making the final score 78 1/2-66 1/2.

In a meet where several key performers had off days with sub par performances, other performers gave the Redmen some surprise results. When Tewksbury's top shot put man fouled on all three throws, unheralded Scott Fay came through with a throw four feet further than his best to salvage a second place finish for the team.

The field events, usually a strong point, proved to be unpredictable for Tewksbury on this day, as the only win came in the discus throw where Doug Noyes, Chris McHardy, and Joe Fazio led a sweep finish for Tewksbury.

Joe Hannon pole vaulted to a personal best of 9'6", but lost out on first place on the basis of missing one more time on a previous height. Dave Flanagan tied for third in the same event. Richie Lapham came through with a surprise second place finish in the javelin, taking the place on his last toss.

Bud MacAllister came up with a personal best long jump of 19'3 1/4", but still had to settle for second place ahead of third place finisher, teammate Mark Christoffels. Noyes took a third in the shot put behind Fay, while Christoffels salvaged a second place in the triple jump. Jim Field jumped to a personal best 5'10" jump, but also lost out to his Lawrence opponent.

Steven Murphy started the Redmen comeback with an easy victory in the two mile run before Lawrence took one-two in the high hurdles and first place in the 100 meter dash.

Tewksbury then began scoring big. MacAllister took a third in the 110 meter high hurdles, while Richie Lapham and Kenn Coviello took second and third place in the 100 meters in what was a highly controversial race, with the decision finally being given to Lawrence.

The 440 yard relay team needed a good finishing kick from senior Jim Field to give the Redmen their first victory in two years in this event.

TMHS girls' track

Tewksbury track quickly improving

As the new members of the Tewksbury High School girls' track team become proficient at their events, the team is quickly becoming a very strong and complete track team.

This was evident last Wednesday when Tewksbury not only beat Lawrence, 106-25, but turned in a long series of excellent performances as well.

Senior co-captain Fran Mulrain led the way as usual with outstanding performances in the triple jump and mile run. Her leap of 33'7 1/2" in the triple jump was one of the best in the Merrimack Valley Conference this year. She won the mile with relative ease, crafting a very fine 5:43 time in a race that she was in control of from the start.

Tewksbury's other captains also did very well. Tracy Meehan won her specialty, the 100 meter hurdles, and Eileen Kiely threw her best javelin toss of the year to take second place in that event.

Renee Juchnevics continued to gather lots of points for Tewksbury by winning the high jump with a 4'8" leap, hitting the line first in the 220 and running a strong leg of the winning 400 relay team.

Sandy Keon, a freshman who is quickly mastering two throwing events, won the javelin with a fine 82'2 1/2" throw and took first place in the discus.

Justine Short is quickly proving herself to a really fine sprinter as she won the 100 meter race with a strong performance.

Lisa Thayer pulled away from everyone in the 440 to take first with an impressive 64.1 clocking. That time was the best ever run for the 440 by a freshman at TMHS.

Tricia Censullo is getting tougher in the 300 meter hurdles every week. In the Lawrence meet she blazed to a 51.5 time, one of the best in the MVC for that event so far this season.

Kerry Silk continues to run fine half mile races. This week she ran a well-paced and strong 2:35. Kerry revealed in this race the kind of speed and sense of pace that will soon enable her to break the 2:30 barrier in the half mile.

The 440 relay team ran its' best time of the season, a strong 54.6 run put together by Kellie Lightfoot, Renee Juchnevics, along with Tricia and Justine Short.

The strength of the Tewksbury team is revealed even more by the depth the Redmen show in every event. Tewksbury placed second in 12 events. Many of these places were taken by girls who ran personal bests or who did fine jobs in events they ran for the first time.

Second places were taken by Kris Conley in the 300 meter low hurdles, Amy DiGiorgio in the 100 meter hurdles, Lisa Thayer in the high jump, Justine Short in the long jump, Peggy Forsyth in the two mile, Kelly Norton in the 100 and 220, Jeanne Muise, who ran an outstanding 6:04 in her first ever mile, Chris Blake in the 440, and Mary Horgan in the 880.

Several girls on the team took third places with fine personal best performances. These included: Sharon Alley in the javelin, Andrea Lombard, in the long jump, Tricia Censullo in the triple jump, Krissie Connor in the two mile, Claire Tremblay in the 100 meter hurdles, Jennifer Rogers in the 100 meters, Lisa Barry in the 440, and Lori Nunziato in the 880.

The win over Lawrence puts the Tewksbury record at 2-2. With their performances improving every week, the girls on the team are poised to give the teams in the remaining five meets some stiff competition.

Town joins new league

Tewksbury kicks Pop Warner

The directors and coaches of Tewksbury Youth Football have been hard at work preparing for another season of safe, exciting and enjoyable football for the youth of the town. Equipment is being dusted off and inventoried. Helmets and pads are being safely tested. Administrators are busy preparing lists for the registration drive to begin in May. This flurry of activity is in preparation for Tewksbury's inaugural season in the Central Massachusetts Youth Athletic Association (CMYAA).

New league, new adventures, new friends. For various reasons, Tewksbury has decided to end its affiliation with Pop Warner Football. In searching for a new league, the primary consideration was the safety and enjoyment of the children who will participate. Matching players by age and weight is critical to the safety issue. The CMYAA meets this requirement. Structured much like Pop Warner, it too has Midgets (A Team), Jr. Midget (B Team), Pee Wee (C Team) and Jr. Pee Wee (D Team).

Players will be placed on teams based on age and weight ranging from as young as eight years old and 55 pounds to as old as 14 years and 135 pounds. A full compliment of cheerleaders will accompany each team in the same age categories.

CMYAA Incorporated has been a youth football league since 1968. It currently has 33 cities and towns playing under its structure. The focus and objective of the new league, as stated in their football rule book, is to "foster the principles of team play, self discipline and physical fitness by stressing the fundamentals of the game and insuring safe playing conditions."

With the town's acceptance into the CMYAA, Tewksbury's youth can look forward to a year free of controversy and filled with all the fun of football in the fall.

For all who participate in or administer youth sport programs, it may benefit Tewksbury to pause and reflect upon the CMYAA's Bill of Rights for Young Athletes.

1. Right to participate in sports;
2. Right to participate at a level commensurate with each child's maturity and ability;
3. Right to have qualified adult leadership;
4. Right to play as a child and not as an adult;
5. Right of children to share in the leadership and decision making of their sport participation;
6. Right to participate in safe and healthy environments;
7. Right to proper preparation for participation in sports;
8. Right to an equal opportunity to strive for success;
9. Right to be treated with dignity;
10. Right to have fun in sports.

Thursday, May 2, at 7 p.m. the Wilmington Recreation Department will hold an information session in the town hall for people who may be interested in a group trip to Disney World next April school vacation.

Betty Hadley of Disney World will be the guest speaker. She will explain the different package plans that are available. This meeting will be very important. It may decide whether or not the Wilmington Recreation Department proceeds with the plans.

Those who plan to attend are asked to call the Recreation Department at 658-4270.

Dart playoffs in high gear

The smoke has cleared after the battle. The battle being the opening round of the playoffs for the North Suburban Dart League. When things did clear, there were only four teams left standing out of the eight that started. Those four will go on to do battle again next week in the semifinals.

The games could not have been more exciting. All of the teams were pretty evenly matched, and everyone expected a very close and competitive game. And close they were. It's just unfortunate that someone had to lose, because each team played with great heart and determination. But you can be sure those teams will be right in the middle of things again next season.

Over in North Reading, two games took place. The first between Bucko's and the Horse Shoe Gold. The game could not have been any closer, as the first nine points would win the match. Bucko's went on to win, 9-8, but it was no easy task. The match was tied at 8-8 with one deciding game remaining and that game went right down to the wire. The Horse Shoe played well.

There was a bit of an upset in the other game, with the defending champs being eliminated in the first round. The Rookies were edged out by the K of C in another 9-8 squeaker.

Over in Wilmington, the D.A.V. and Bucko's Cork Busters went at each other. The D.A.V. was unable to beat Bucko's II in the regular season. But they seemed to have it all together for this game. The D.A.V. won the match, 9-0. But the score does not tell it all. Both teams played well, and the games could have gone either way. Most of the games were very close.

Up in Andover there was one other game going on between the first place team, the Town Grill-B and the Moose I. This was another very exciting game, with the Grill-B going on to win the match, 9-6.

Tryouts

The Lowell Junior Chiefs Hockey Club, a member of the Metropolitan Boston Hockey League, will be holding tryouts for Midget teams only at Skate 3, Tyngsboro on Saturday, May 4 at 6 p.m.

For further information, contact Judie King at 957-2746 or Ken Hyatt at 667-8489.

miler, took a much needed second and third respectively in the mile run. Tewksbury and Lawrence would then swap one-two finishes, as Richie Lapham and Steve Murphy took one-two in the 440 yard dash, while Lawrence did the same in the 300 meter low hurdles, with Jim Field finishing third.

Trailing by seven points with three events left, Tewksbury would score 21 out of the last 23 points and win the meet, as Ed Piscopo and Joe Hannon came through with first and second place performances respectively in the 880 yard run, an event that was followed by the one-two finish in the 220 yard run and the mile relay victory of Pat Green, Mike Goodine, Joe Hannon and Ed Piscopo.

Class B

State Coaches Relays
Many respectable performances were accomplished during this long Saturday morning and afternoon in Reading, as the Redmen participated in the annual State Coaches Relays.

Doug Noyes led the Redmen to a fifth place finish in the discus relay (three man total distance), with a toss of 128' 3 1/2". Teammates Chris McHardy and Pat Green also received ribbons in this event.

Mark Christoffels, Buddy MacAllister and Mike Goodine took third place medals for their good team effort in the triple jump relay. The other team to place was the 4 x 440 yard relay, as Steven Murphy led his quartet with a good 2:03 time.

Other good performances on this day came from Eric Meininghaus in the long jump, Doug Noyes in the shot put, Billy Donahue in the pole vault, David French in the spring medley relay, distance medley participants Steven Ellwood, Pat Green, Brian Tremblay, Robbie Busch, and the second entered team in the same event of Keith Bennett, Tim McCaffery, Dave Flanagan, and Shawn Linnehan. The mile relay squad got excellent performances from Steve Murphy, Richie Lapham and Ed Piscopo, as well as a gutsy performance from injured Mike Goodine.

The Redmen travel to Dracut Wednesday (May 1) for a 3:30 meet and then to Wilmington on Saturday for the annual frosh-soph Northern Area Meet. In a schedule change, TMHS will host the MVC League leaders Methuen at the Tewksbury track Tuesday, May 7, also at 3:30 p.m. Methuen has several top New England performers on their squad, including Jeff Baker, one of the top high school athletes east of the Mississippi.

Sports editor's note: This story was submitted by TMHS boys' track coach Steve Levine.

and freshmen Joey McMenimen and Pat Nally.

Special recognition was given to Mark Eddy and Joey McMenimen, both of whom were named to the Tournament All-Star team.

The award to the player who demonstrated the most sportsmanlike conduct was given to Eric Braciska.

The players and parents would like to give a special thanks to coach Larry McGrath, whose extra effort and dedication are deeply appreciated.

Town meeting keeps voters into wee hours

The 1985 annual town meeting in Wilmington last Saturday was a grueling business of nearly 10 hours with a brief recess for supper. The moderator allowed an hour and a quarter. There were more than a few voters who took two hours or longer. The meeting went on to finish at 1:23 a.m. (standard time) on Sunday morning.

It was Article 38 that kept the voters at the town meeting. That article sought to rezone land behind the Roberts house for condominium housing.

Wilmington for the last several years has had a lottery system for deciding which article follows which article in town meeting. Article 38 did not come up until 12:43 a.m., while the voters grimly hung on. There were about 180 voters in the audience at that time with 11 more out in the hall.

Attorney Joe Courtney, who discussed the article on the floor of the town meeting had predicted the final result as reported elsewhere, was 147 negative, to four in favor.

Another housing article was that of the Wilmington Housing Authority. The WHA sought permission to transform the old South School, more recently the Wilmington Skating Club on Chestnut Street into a "scattered site" home.

The article came on the floor at 11:10 p.m. with Danny Gillis carrying the ball, in a manner of speaking. Gillis, a member of the housing authority, was unable to convince the town meeting, and he lost 129 to 59.

The approval of the purchase of a computer service for the public library was not without its own drama. Article 26 came on the floor at 11:43 p.m. with Library Chairman George Boylen making the motion. The finance committee didn't have any money left, and said so. That committee wanted to defer the idea for a year.

Town Manager Buzz Stapeczynski created quite a stir when he announced he had $82,000 available, money that had been transferred to the town from the state, through the offices of Representative Miceli.

During the discussion on the town budget, Saturday afternoon, an additional $340,000 had been sought, by the school committee, money which it did not get. Some voters, Joe Woods and George Allan, chairman of the water commissioners being two, felt that the town meeting should have known of this money.

But the discussion very quickly went back to the library article. The voters were very serious about the business. For 20 minutes, following the lead of Maybelle Bliss, voter after voter stood up to say that the service was needed.

It was almost like a church revival meeting. Voters who were very much in favor were busy trying to convince other voters who were also very much in favor. Each, in turn, explained how the $80,000 would help the people of Wilmington get books from other libraries.

The only person who was unimpressed was John Tsicoulas of Marcus Road. Mr. Tsicoulas thought the town should spend the $80,000 for books for Wilmington residents.

When the moderator called for the aye vote everyone seemed to respond. When he called for the nay vote, there wasn't a sound. The silence was not only dramatic, it was deafening.

Another unanimous vote was that which removed the word "sole" from the 1966 town vote establishing the Wilmington Development Authority. For the past 19 years the WRA has been developing land in South Wilmington now Jewel Drive. Now it is looking for more work.

The authority was first proposed about 20 years ago by the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce. There were voters at the meeting 19 years ago who were very, very suspicious of the Chamber of Commerce. It was they who put in the word "sole," meaning thereby that the WRA could do nothing else.

It took the town meeting only four minutes to vote in favor of Article 24 presented by WRA Chairman Jay Donovan. Donovan said the WRA seeks to clear decadent and decayed areas along Lowell Street and Main Street, and to be in a position to protect people who own land along those streets from state action, when (and if) the state finally starts work on those roads.

Solid approval was also expressed by the voters on the proposal for funding a study of electric service, possibly to establish the town's own electric light system. It was the first time the public had a chance to express approval or disapproval of the controversial actions against the Reading Municipal Light Department.

Fifteen thousand dollars was asked for under Article 11. Selectmen Cain, DePasquale and Stewart spoke for the article, and the finance committee disapproved. The discussion lasted 11 minutes. There were only two negative votes.

There was one item in the town budget, for those who like jokes. Two thousand dollars was appropriated for an Universal type exercise machine for the members of the Wilmington Fire Department.

And it passed. Honest. Wilmington will now have a Handicapped Commission, as the result of favorable action on Article 25. There are to be seven members, to be appointed by the town manager.

Larry Curtis of Andover Street made the presentation for the article. A Vietnam veteran, he has been a quadriplegic since being injured in a work-related accident twelve years ago. He was one of two persons at the town meeting in wheelchairs.

Curtis has served as chairman of the Handicapped Affairs Committee for the past 15 months. The voters were impressed by the quality of his presentation.

The final words of the meeting, at 1:23 a.m., came from, of course Moderator Mike Caira. Mike is an impressive person, in or out of town meeting. He is always certain of where he is, in discussions, and he keeps errant voters in line, in a kindly way. He also has an occasional word which brings down the house.

That's the way it was at 1:23 a.m.

Town Manager Buzz Stapeczynski had a report to make to the town. The town meeting had spent, he said, just over $16,000,000. It had exceeded the limits of Proposition 2½ by a little over $3600.

Stapeczynski said that he might be asking the selectmen for a special town meeting in September, if, before that time, he could not find sufficient funds to straighten out the budget.

"I'm sure you will find it," said Mike. He was very straight faced, before he broke into a grin, and the town meeting broke into a roar of laughter.

Thus, the senior citizen dental care program will be offered this month to citizens 60 and over. This will include a free preliminary dental examination during the month of May. This free examination will include an examination of the mouth, oral tissues, teeth, dentures, or appliances. It does not include x-rays and general health history.

To take part in the program all seniors need to do is call a participating dentist and make an appointment. In Wilmington the dentist in the program is Dr. Richard Hornung, 306 Main St., 658-6200.

How would you milk a honey bee?

By JIM ROUILLARD

The killer bees are coming. But local beekeepers are not particularly worried. John Mikoluk of Woburn, in fact, who keeps several hives at his home on Green Street — is more concerned with finding someone to milk his honey-bees, since his fingers aren't quite slender enough.

"Do you want a part-time job?" Mikoluk often asks the waitresses at Friendly's in Woburn.

"Doing what?"

"Milking my bees. My fingers are too fat; I can't do it any more."

The women usually decline the part-time job, Mikoluk said, but always with sympathy: "Yeah, I know what you mean — girls do have skinnier fingers."

"I wish I could help," replied one. "But I've got just one question: How do you know when you've milked all the bees?"

Mikoluk, who is secretary to the Essex County Beekeepers' Association, and likes to joke about the bees he loves, confesses he had no answer to that one by an ingenious waitress. But when people ask how he gets the honey, he tells them the truth: he just turns the spigot at the bottom of the hive.

Mikoluk keeps more than a dozen hives in his yard — which is at least a dozen too many, according to his wife, Beth (Rafalski) — whose sense of humor is equal to her husband's. She said she suspects her husband has even more hives hidden from her somewhere on their property.

John, who took the Dadant Company's top prizes at the Topsfield Fair, for "Best Honey Exhibit at the Honey Show," and the top "Honey Quality Award," in 1982 and 1984, introduced me not only to his bees, but to a group of lively and enthusiastic people as well — beekeepers all — including the first Massachusetts Honey Queen herself, Chris Messier of North Brookfield.

The work in a honey-bee hive, Mikoluk explained, is all done by the females, whose house-keeping is meticulous: "They're always cleaning the hive." They're so meticulous, in fact, that when winter comes they throw the males out, to freeze or starve, whichever comes first. The female workers then devote themselves to tending the eggs, which Mikoluk said start to blossom out just about now, in the months of April and May.

A friendly, jocular man of Russian descent, who said his 95-year-old father Fred Mikoluk, still loves to garden, the younger Mikoluk explained that the only Russian he knows consists of "troika," "nostrovia," and "nyet." But he does know a lot about bees.

"Of course, I could never make a living at it," Mikoluk said. "It's just the fun in it that attracts most of us to bee-keeping. Each year we (the members of the Essex County and Massachusetts Federation of Beekeepers Associations) compete for prizes, like the best extracted honey in the show, just so we can have fun, and hassle each other when we win or lose."

"The bees (the females, that is, who remain after kicking out the drones) eat honey all winter long. If you go close to a bee hive at night, you'll hear a faint humming; it's the muscles which vibrate from the honey which the bees eat; the bees are fanning their wings to keep the moisture off the nectar."

But it's unwise to go near a hive with the odor of soap, or especially perfume on. Mikoluk cautioned. "Scents can irritate the bees — and you may not be happy with the results."

One of the Mikoluks' friends, in fact, Beth explained, complained to John that his bees had "bit" him.

"They didn't," John responded.

"I'm telling you they bit me," the friend insisted.

"No, they didn't."

"I'll show you," the friend said, displaying a sizable welt.

"And I'm telling you my bees did not bite you," said John. "They stung you."

As for the Massachusetts Honey Queen, Chris Messier said with a smile that she has grown used to dealing with the usual clichés about her title: "I'll be sure to give you a buzz," people tell her. They also remark that she's "A honey of a queen."

The irony is that they're right. The Indiana native is both very attractive, and a strong

Letters that have been received

FM TALK: Our gallivanting-around correspondent opened his mail bag this week, and the following excerpts are from a few of the letters sent to him recently:

Dear Dan:

I've been reading your column for years, and enjoy it thoroughly. I'm wondering — how on earth do you keep coming up with all those ideas to write about? I would think you'd have run out by now.

A Curious Reader from Stoneham

Dear Curious Reader from Stoneham,

Since you've been following my column for years, you might recall I've mentioned several times that my ideas originate from a myriad of sources, most notably from simply keeping informed about what's going on around me. Many of my ideas come from you readers who write to me with terrific suggestions. And if all else fails, I resort to my old stand-by — I sit in my underwear in front of the refrigerator, drink a beer and write poetry. That always produces at least one great idea.

Dear Dan,

I remember the time you came to my high school English class and spoke about writing and the theatre. Because of you, I've decided to pursue a career in either the arts or journalism. I was wondering if you could give me a few words of advice that will help me get on the right path.

Hungry for Knowledge

Dear Hungry for Knowledge,

I'm not sure that my few words of advice will put you, as you say, "on the right path" to a successful career in the arts or journalism, but I'll make an attempt. Once you've learned the mechanics and assuming you have thematic ability, I can tell you what I believe is the key to a fulfilling career in journalism: editorial independence. What this translates into, quite simply, is freedom.

An editorial in the New Yorker magazine recently summed up why this freedom is so important: "To report what (you) believe to be true, to write what (you) want to write...with no outside intervention, without fear, without constraints, in defiance of commercial pressures or any other pressure beyond those of (your) own conscience and sense of responsibility."

Those words may be a bit much to swallow all in one sitting, but applying those principles in my writing, I try to create fresh statements that haven't been said before (and that's not easy!). I try to be thorough and accurate. As you know, I try to be funny as often as possible, because I feel there's a need for more humor in this world. I try to contribute something worthwhile, and following the example set by those

How to remove everything

Have you ever heard about getting chewing gum out of a carpet with peanut butter? Don't try it; but, it's not as far-fetched as it may sound. There are literally dozens of favorite home remedies which are passed around, for removal of commonly-faced enemies like ball-point ink, pet stains, wine spills, candle wax, lipstick (make-up), etc.

The hazard is that a person often takes a single success story and tries to turn it into a general panacea. "I always use hair spray" or, "Seltzer water works great" or, maybe praising some brandname marvel. These remedies focus on the soiling substance and tend to overlook the special characteristics of the fabric from which the substance is to be removed. As a result, once-easily-corrected problems may become irreversible by the overzealous use of someone else's claimed "sure-cure."

Avoiding Costly Replacements. The old warning "Look Before You Leap" was never more important than in dealing with unwanted spots on soft surfaces. A few moments taken to analyze the situation can avoid costly replacements or embarrassing appearance blemishes says Mary Williams, Middlesex County Extension Service.

Professionals know that there is no one way to get anything out of everything. An olefin fabric can be damaged by rubbing, even though it is totally colorfast. Cotton fibers are subject to cellulosic browning in contact with alkaline cleaning agents. A velvet construction may show pile distortion if an offending spot is blotted too heavily.

Rules to Remember. There are a few simple rules, however, which are easily remembered and may help change old habits.

1. Remove what's there before adding something else. Don't rush in with some magical all-purpose cleaner. (a) Liquid spills should be soaked up promptly into a clean dry towel or tissue... tentatively at first to prevent pushing in... then, with firm pressure by dry towel sections until only slight dampness remains. (b) Wet solids should be carefully lifted up with dull knife or spoon (or "pinch-blotted"). (Exceptions: Certain gums, waxes, tars and paints require special techniques.) (c) Dry solids should be vacuumed and softly brushed repeatedly. (Cigar or cigarette ashes seldom require more than this.) Strike forcibly with flat ruler and/or scrape with spoon, if encrusted.

2. Add as little as possible, of appropriate cleaning chemical underline appropriate! (You can always add more a second time, or a different cleaner is necessary.)

3. Be gentle, patient and persevering (willing to try again and again). (a) Blot or wipe, never rub, a fabric. (b) Allow to dry between attempts to remove.

4. Seek competent advice, when in doubt or when initial efforts are unsuccessful.

Consider the Washing Machine. Think of all the steps and the time of the various cycles to get home laundry clean. Is it logical to expect that a sofa or carpet (which cannot be thrown in the washing machine with the soapy water, softener and bleach repeatedly sloshing through it and around it should release a spot in just a few seconds with some "magic potion"?

If you can get at the sofa fabric from only one side. If you can use only limited liquid, not a tub full. If you can't wring it out or "spin" it damp. If you are guessing about the right cleaning agent. If you are not sure what caused the spot or how deep it is. If you have had very little experience in any kind of spot removal from fabric furnishings. If you must be careful about rubbing it because you might damage the finish or fray the weave. Then, it should not be a surprise when a "whiff-and-wipe" fails to correct the problem. For further information contact your local Cooperative Extension Service to request the booklet "Removing Stains From Fabrics."

Give a Lifeline; an ideal gift for Mom

Choate-Symmes Health Services has an innovative idea for what to give your mother for Mother's Day, which is May 12 this year.

It's Lifeline, a personal emergency response system designed for the person who lives alone and is at high medical risk. The Lifeline program insures independence and peace of mind for the person living alone, and for that person's family.

Lifeline subscribers are able to live at home alone and not worry, for they know if they face a medical emergency, all they have to do is activate their Lifeline unit, and help will be on the way. Lifeline encourages individuals, especially the handicapped and the elderly, to be independent as long as possible.

A small, remote control button is clipped on one's belt, worn in a pocket or pouch, or worn on a chain around the neck. Pressing the 'help' button signals the main unit attached to the subscriber's phone, which in turn dials the Emergency Response Center at the Symmes Hospital Division.

Trained personnel receive the call for help and immediately a re-set button on the unit, which dials the Emergency Response Center, signifying that help has arrived. An emergency nurse calls the responder and if an ambulance is needed, the nurse calls the ambulance to transport the patient to the hospital of his or her choice.

Cost of the Lifeline unit, including installation, is nominal, but no one is turned down because of lack of funds. Volunteers from Symmes who have been trained in the technical aspects of the program install the units in an individual's home and periodically check to make sure that the units are operating properly.

For more information on Lifeline as a Mother's Day gift, call Coordinator Ann Cooper at Symmes, 646-1500, ext. 1403.

Woburn bee keeper enjoys his work champion of the honey-bee. She has lived in Massachusetts for more than 11 years, and said she considers New England her home.

An apiarist for five years now, Chris said part of her duties as Massachusetts Honey Queen is to help educate the public about the bee, for most people have no idea what a bee does.

She also seeks to make people understand that they need not be afraid of honey bees — and to appreciate what the bee contributes to the quality of life.

"Our whole society would change drastically without honey bees," she said. "We would have very few flowers or fruit — and would even have to do without alfalfa hay, which is an essential crop for the meat and dairy industries." The most extensively cultivated forage crop in the United States, alfalfa is also particularly valuable as a green manure, taking nitrogen from the air — and its deep-growing roots draw from the lower soils large quantities of lime, phosphoric acid, potash, and other minerals useful as crop foods. The pollination provided by the honey bee, Messier said, is essential to the propagation of alfalfa.

Neither Chris Messier nor John Mikoluk could understand how people confuse bees with wasps — but so they do.

Among the major differences which John pointed out is that bees are all vegetarians, whereas wasps are carnivores as well; they may feed on rotted flesh or, even worse, they may prey on peaceful honey bees.

"When a honey-bee is full of nectar," Mikoluk explained, "she cannot bend her body to bring her stinger to play on an attacking wasp. So the wasps wait until the bee is full of nectar, then attack her, tear her to pieces, and carry the flesh back to their nest."

Each winter, Mikoluk said, bees need a cleansing flight. They cannot clean themselves in the nest, and so build up "nosema" spores in their system. So some bee-keepers treat their swarms with a medication called "fumidil-bee," mixed with sugar, to help them overcome the growth of nosema spores. But other keepers are even kinder to their insects — they take their bees south — and release them for a cleansing flight in a warmer climate.

Of course all keepers cannot afford to give their bees a southern vacation. Mikoluk said, so some euthanize them and buy new swarms each spring.

Some people even love bees so much, John added, that they keep hives, despite the fact that they're allergic to bee venom. Bee stings could prove fatal to these keepers. "But they're willing to risk a sting, and keep a hypodermic syringe nearby with anti-toxin, just in case."

The color of honey proceeds to deepen as the season advances, Mikoluk said. In the spring the color is light, and it gets darker towards fall, as the bees gather nectar from the later-blooming flowers like goldenrod and the purple, wild New England astor.

Among the beekeepers Mikoluk introduced was George Rigby, a cornettist who said one of his bees once stung him on the lip just before he was due to play at a concert. But he didn't let the band down; he said he drafted his uncle to blow the instrument, while George played the keys.

No story of bees would be complete without a reference to killer bees — originally imported from Africa to South America — which popular novels and films tell us are advancing at the rate of 200 miles per year towards the North American continent.

And the killer bees ARE proceeding north, according to the beekeepers interviewed, but they are not alarmed. "We have pictures of people working with the killer bees," one said, "and they don't seem disturbed by them. There have been cases of death from killer-bee stings, but the victims were probably allergic."

"The killer bee is about the size of an Italian honey bee (apis mellifera) — but the killer bee queens will not accept the Italian drones as some apiarists had hoped they would do — to increase the docility of the killer bees."

"The problem is the killer bee likes to travel too much," according to Mikoluk, "and the swarm frequently divides, so the fear is that they may simply arrive in an area and take over another hive" of a more peaceful variety, driving the original owners out or destroying them.

As for the drones, Chris Messier explained, if a particular individual hasn't made it to winter to be driven out by the female workers, it's because he succeeded, in the nuptial flight with the queen bee herself. She can be identified, by the way, from her longer abdomen and less-pronounced stripes. The drone's reward for success?

Death, Chris said, because the males have one chance to fertilize the queen, then they die. And the queen's role? She's an egg-laying machine, producing from 1,000 to 1,500 eggs a day.

Chris Messier supplied some mouth-watering recipes, ranging from a frozen strawberry refresher made from apple juice, strawberries and honey — to an icing made from honey, butter and softened cream cheese.

But to return to the pun, most of which made the 1984-1985 Massachusetts Honey Queen wince good-naturedly, several of the beekeepers "waxed" particularly enthusiastic over a recipe for honey-cake, which is so good, they said, it never lasts long enough to spoil.

Be kind to honey-bees, never confuse them with wasps, and you might get a copy of the recipe.

Stoneham Mens' Soccer League has openings

With the beginning of the 1985 Mens Summer Soccer season just one month away, team openings are being filled rapidly. We have been very pleased with the enthusiastic response. The team realignment and game schedule format have been added boost for the league and the upcoming season promises to be a competitive and enjoyable one. We have obtained the permits for Tuesday and Thursday nights with the first game starting at 5:45 and the second at 7:00. We will be retaining the services of excellent Soccer officials, and supplying team jerseys. At the present time we have a few openings and are interested in hearing from soccer alumni, or soccer players from high school or college. Contact Jack McDonnell 438-0274 for information.

COMMUNITY BOATING

You don't have to own a boat to learn to sail - at least, not in Boston. For the Hub is blessed with having the oldest and largest non-profit sailing club in the country.

It's called Community Boating, and last year more than 6,000 persons sailed from Community's Boathouse on the Charles River. Most of them had never been in a boat before, but after a few lessons, there they were, doing the impossible, sailing all by themselves.

Sound interesting? Well, to introduce newcomers to sailing, Community Boating is holding an Open House on Saturday, May 4 and Sunday, May 5. From 9 a.m. until sunset there will be free introductory sails, classes, and films at the Boathouse, located on the Esplanade between the Hatch Shell and the Longfellow Bridge. More information can be obtained by calling 523-1038.

NON-SMOKING SAILING VACATIONS

The Schooner Mary Day is offering passengers four non-smoking cruises among its 19 sailing dates in 1985.

The two-masted, 83 foot Mary Day recaptures the sailing spirit of days of old as she sets sail every Monday morning, June through September. Mary Day sails where the wind takes her, exploring quaint fishing villages and the islands along the Maine coast. Rates for the six day cruises range from $380 to $425 per person which includes all meals, taxes and gratuities.

Cabins aboard ship are small but comfortable, each with ample headroom, a door, hatch and window. Individual washbasins, towels and face cloths are provided, and passengers dip water from barrels on deck. Food is fresh, bountiful and cooked on a wood stove in the ship's galley. A highlight of each sailing is a lobster bake prepared over a driftwood fire. Passengers can help with the sailing or just relax as they wish.

According to Havilah Hawkins, captain of the Mary Day, the non-smoking cruises began several years ago when his father accepted an American Lung Association charter. Captain Hawkins stated that "demand for our non-smoking cruises has been increasing every year as more and more people quit smoking."

For more information on sailing vacations aboard the Schooner Mary Day, call 207-236-2750 or write Captain H.S. Hawkins, Box 798DR, Camden, Maine 04843.

Judy Collins appears at Collins Center May 18th

Freshly blooming May flowers welcome the return of the dynamic, talented and gifted Judy Collins for a command performance at the J. Everett Collins Center for the Performing Arts on Saturday, May 18 at 8 p.m.

Returning by popular demand, Judy will again bring to the Merrimack Valley her own special style of contemporary pop music.

Heralded by the critics as "her best to date," Judy's concert will span the musical spectrum from folk songs of the early and mid-sixties to the sophisticated sounds of today. "Both Sides Now," "Memory" from Cats, "Send in the Clowns," and "Chelsea Morning" are but a few of the songs Judy will include in her repertoire.

Over the course of the 19 LP's she has recorded since 1961, Judy has interpreted songs in folk, rock, country, theatre and other idioms, infusing each with her own style. As she enters her third decade as a recording artist, Judy has a body of work to her credit of both commercial and artistic importance.

Her recent sold-out performance at Boston's Symphony Hall is illustrative of her continued popularity, a popularity evidenced by her sold-out national concert tour this spring.

Tickets for Judy Collins, May 18 at 8 p.m. at the Collins Center, Shawsheen Road in Andover, are still available "but going fast" as one box office person said today.

Call the Collins Center at 470-1905 for reservations and information, or visit the Box Office to select your seats.

Tickets are also available at Just For You at 36 Main St. and the Main Street offices of the Andover Bank in Andover and North Andover.

The presentation is sponsored by the Andover Endowment for the Arts.

MOVIE REVIEWS

Rochele Flynn

Ghoulies/ Stick

Ghoulies Starring Peter Liapis, Lisa Pelikan, Michael Des Barres. Directed by Luca Bercovici. Produced by Jefery Levy. Written by Bercovici and Levy. Rated (violence, profanity).

Ghoulies is the kind of movie that connoisseurs of fine schlock flock to. It's good, old-fashioned fun junk, like the second feature at a drive-in was during the 1950's and '60's. Nobody goes because the movie is high drama, but because you can take along your main squeeze, buy a big bucket of popcorn and scream at the scary parts and laugh at the stupidity of it all. Sound like fun?

Ghoulies has it all, black magic, slimy green creatures, walking corpses, lightening bolts, supernatural midgets and a creepy mansion. The actors aren't very talented, the script is silly and the special effects scream latex and glue. Also, the lighting and direction are nearly non-existent, making Ghoulies a monster movie right up there with classics like Robot Monster and Attack of the Killer Tomatoes.

The ghoulies upon whom this film pivots are tiny demons called up from the darkest corners of the nether world to serve a satanic master, Jonathan, played by Peter Liapis. Poor old Jon, you see, is really the child of another class. A devil worshiper who left the boy a decrepit mansion and lots of unusual cravings when he went to meet his hellish creator. Jonathan — who takes his hobbies quite seriously — scorns such capitalistic ideals as finishing college and instead decides on becoming a Master of Demonology. Not wanting to be lonely, Jon takes his girl friend (Lisa Pelikan) and seven of his nearest and dearest friends along for the ride. It is interesting to note that the young woman known as Donna the Screamer is actually the late Jane Mansfield's daughter.

Somehow, it doesn't matter that Ghoulies is artistic and technical rubbish. Teens who don't know any better will go because they are lured in by the sophisticated advertising campaign and adults who do know better will attend because it's fun to have the screaming meemies for a little while. Of course, all of us aficionados of truly horrible horror films will be there laughing over the ridiculous dialogue and looking for the microphones and shadows that were not edited out because of the low budget.

Stick Starring Burt Reynolds, Candice Bergen, George Segal, Charles Durning, Castulo Guerra. Directed by Reynolds. Produced by Jennings Lang. Screenplay by Elmore Leonard and Joseph Stinson, based on Leonard's novel. Rated R (profanity, violence).

Never having read Elmore Leonard's novel Stick, this reviewer had not one pre-conceived notion and could not compare the film with the book. Therefore, this review should not reflect upon the novel, which is rumored to be quite interesting and completely unlike this dreadful movie.

One can only wonder, however, how much influence Leonard had over this film. After all, he is credited as one of the screenwriters, and all of the blame can't be passed on to director Burt Reynolds, because it doesn't appear as if the script was a masterpiece to begin with. For some reason, Reynolds continues to direct his own pictures, and although he has had some commercial success in the past, his direction is consistently met with critical abuse. You'd think he'd get the message and give up. Stick is little more than choppy, poorly edited sensationalism. The characters are silly and unrealistic, and Reynolds has the incredible ego to appear tanned and beautiful in each scene, no matter how out of context it is.

Reynolds, as the title character, Ernest Stickley, plays a recently released convict who just did a seven year stretch and is headed to Miami to look up some pals from prison and his teenaged daughter, played by Eddie Fisher and Connie Stevens' child, Tricia Leigh Fisher.

Well, Stick gets himself tangled up with a drug dealer (Castulo Guerra) who also peddles black magic, and Chuckie, another dealer (Charles Durning) who is just plain nuts. Durning's character is perhaps the most ridiculous in the film. His blonde wig is never in place, his eyebrows appear to be glued on, and his wardrobe leans heavily toward large, loud Hawaiian shirts.

Reynolds seeks refuge of sorts by becoming the chauffeur for an asinine millionaire (George Segal), and then begins a flat love affair with the millionaire's financial advisor, played by Candice Bergen. There is nothing in this less than thrilling thriller geared toward holding an audience's attention, and Reynolds' direction would be better suited to 30 second commercials. After all, with Reynolds hopping around looking macho and Segal guffawing on cue, Stick is as shallow and borish as any prime time advertisement.

CANDICE BERGEN is featured as the beautiful and brainy stock analyst Kyle who becomes enamored with ex-con turned chauffeur, Stick (Burt Reynolds).

In ancient Babylonia, in a ritual that humbled the king, the high priest took away the king's crown, slapped his face, and pulled his ears, says National Geographic World. After that, the king knelt before an idol and was recrowned.

ANTHONY MANCONI

It behooves us to consider every human being a brother and sister in the eternal quest to eradicate disease, hunger and loneliness. It is the only way that we can co-exist harmoniously without regard to race, creed or color. A little rivalry however is good for progress. The English boast about their "Big Ben," the Italians rave about the "Tower of Pisa," the French have the Eiffel Tower as a tourist attraction, Egypt has the "Pyramids" and the Chinese have the "Great Wall of China."

Well let me tell you something we can all take credit for, each and everyone of these masterpieces of engineering because that's what we Americans are, people from almost every country of the world. That's why we are the greatest Nation in the world. If you don't agree there's a ship waiting in the harbor, she sails tomorrow at break of dawn. Tell the captain "Woodchips" sent you but don't be surprised to be asked to walk the plank.

Waiters and waitresses depend on tips to survive. Sometimes a customer forgets to leave even a token and that's when some waiters mumble under their breath, "even a skunk leaves a scent."

Good looks run in some families, noses run in mine. You ought to see our clothes line. My wife Kathy ran after the garbage truck early Tuesday morning shouting, "hey mister am I too late for the garbage?" The foreman took one look at her with her hair up in curlers and wearing an old house coat and said, "No lady! jump right in!" I married my wife because she was different than any of the girls I knew - she was the only one that would marry me.

Socrates died from an overdose of Wedlock. A horse divided against itself cannot stand. The difference between a king and a president is a king is the son of his father and a president isn't. Those are bloopers from my son's English class. Frank Perdue won the "Pullet Surprise." If you would be popular live so that a blind person would like you. Popularity, the lasting kind does not depend upon one having a pretty face or being handsome. You must however, have inner qualities that communicate themselves to others through media other than sight. Some attributes in that category are genuine interest, a gentle voice and friendly touch. They in time will give you a radiant personality, make you likeable and even lovable.

I signed up in January for a three month weight lifting and bodybuilding course by mail. Every week I would receive a heavier weight. After three weeks I gave up but the weights kept coming. The course cost me 200 dollars and didn't do a thing for me, but you ought to see the muscles on Charlie Mullen, our mailman.

My neighbor, Charlie Sweeney said he has a brother who has five daughters, "all girls." "Charlie," I said, "I should hope so." I will respectfully decline any future wedding invitations unless I am assured the music will be Sammy Kaye or Lawrence Welk style, or that ear plugs will be furnished.

I'm just about getting my hearing back after attending my niece Elaine's wedding to Bruce Wise. Both are in the Marine Corps and were honored by the presence of a Marine detail, resplendent in their dress blues. I had a great time with my relatives and friends and making new acquaintances at the reception. Then it happened, the music started. I must be getting old and grouchy but I just can't stand this ear shattering disco, rock or bongo-bongo. I heard jungle music in the South Pacific in WW II that sounded more melodious.

I asked my daughter Maureen, "is that the kind of music you are going to have at your wedding?" "No," she said as I gave a temporary sigh of relief, then she added, "twice as loud!" If that's the case she can include me out of the reception.

There isn't anyone who can listen to Rowan Fitzgerald and John Shea for over an hour without taking a couple of aspirins. Rowan asked Uncle John Shea, "tell me John, why is it that there's a rooster on top of weather vanes and never a hen?" Jon gave Rowan a County Kerry smile and said, "I guess it's because if they put a hen up there it would be to high and difficult to collect the eggs."

Paul Rao, the owner of a bar room, suspected his bartender of doing a little personal dipping in the cash register. One day at closing time he asked him, "did you take any money out of the cash draw tonight?" "Yes," the bartender responded. "I took my car fare out." "O-ho!" exclaimed Paul, "tell me, when did you move to Los Angeles?"

If you were a fisherman and your livelihood depended on the stability, integrity and sea worthiness of your boat you wouldn't have anything to worry about if it was built by Nova Scotian craftsmen. How do I know? Well I worked with them for over ten years in the Boat Shop of the Boston Naval Shipyard. Every keel, plank and decking had to be perfect and they were because these men had pride in their work handed down to them by their ancestors.

The choir of my church went deep sea fishing last summer and two sopranos were nearly lost on the high "C's." No one ever climbed a mountain by looking at it! It is a pleasure for me to mention Charlie Mullen, who with his brother John have been faithful readers of Woodchips. John is a retired Boston Edison employee and Charlie is the friendly mailman at the lab in Winchester. Charlie proudly told me about his two beautiful daughters, Maureen, who attends SMU at North Dartmouth and Sheila, a UMass graduate and now employed by Johnson Roses in Woburn.

MIT admission director please note the following science award winner names. I am confident that some day they will be a credit to your world renowned university. Mr. Ed Butler presented the students of Mrs. Patricia Leone's third grade at St. Patrick's School in Stoneham, awards for their science projects. First prize, Maureen Sheehan, second prize, Carolyn Bane, third prize, Kristin Heggerty and honorable mention to Sheri Arcidiacano, Kristin Stead, Timothy Regan,

Candace Kim, Erin Gottwald, Sandra Corsaro, Martin Murphy, Robert Noonan, Michael

McGovern and Charles McDermott. Congratulations and Woodchips loves you all.

Boston Pops celebrates 100th season

Esplanade concerts along Boston's Charles River have been bringing free concert music to the masses since long before radio

A gala opening tonight and a 15-city tour kick off a new century for a thriving Boston bastion

By Daniel B. Wood
Staff writer of The Christian Science Monitor

Boston
For this city, it is part of the natural rhythm of Spring.

Swanboats appear in the Public Garden, magnolias blossom along Commonwealth Avenue, and one of the world's best orchestras — the Boston Symphony — metamorphoses into "the Pops."

Ninety-five first-rank classical musicians doff black tie and tails for sport jackets in restaurant-waiter blue. For two months, they shelve Beethoven, Bach, and Brahms and dust off John Philip Sousa, light Viennese classics, pop/rock/jazz, and film and Broadway tunes. In highly stylized symphonic orchestration, they celebrate Gershwin to Porter, Rodgers to Sondheim, with a festive flair that allows both audience and musicians to "let the hair down and roll the shirt sleeves up."

when local glitterati throng into the classical Symphony Hall — whose normally staid interior is festooned with baubles, balloons, and mirrors that shimmer across tables of Havarti cheese and supersweet punch — more than just a city will join in the hoopla. People in far corners of the globe will tip their hats to the world's most recorded and widely heard ensemble as it reaches a milestone centennial year.

A peek at the telegrams that poured in in 1979, when late maestro Arthur Fiedler celebrated 50 years of conducting the Pops, hints why the Pops has become so venerated.

"I continually thank God for Arthur Fiedler, at whose hands I first heard live orchestral music," wrote composer/conductor Leonard Bernstein. "You have done more to popularize classical music than anyone I know," wrote jazz great George Shearing. "It is impossible to evaluate the happiness and pleasure you have given to so many through more than half a century," wrote conductor/arranger André Kostelanetz.

Today Fiedler's work is still appreciated. "The influence of the Boston Pops is quite astonishing when you consider that practically every orchestra in America now does pops concerts in the formula developed by Arthur Fiedler through the 1930s and '40s," says David Tomatz, director of the School of Music at the University of Houston.

The Pops's popularity continues unabated five years after Fiedler's passing. Through countrywide performances, a regular PBS television series, films, and more than 50 million records sold, the Boston Pops remains the country's first, oldest, and still leading "pops" orchestra. That means, in the words of BSO founder Henry Higginson, making "concerts of a lighter kind of music" accessible to the broadest possible public.

The now famous tripartite formula includes: a group of shorter, light classical works, overtures, marches, waltzes; an appearance of a soloist, often in a complete concerto; and finally a group of pieces selected from the wide repertoire of current popular songs.

In 1980, the Fiedler baton was handed to John Williams. A four-time Oscar winner, veteran of 60 film scores, including the five top money-grossers of all time, Williams has helped the Pops expand its legacy to include more film, Broadway, and show-tune music — and original compositions by himself and other top name composers, such as Peter Schickele and Peter Maxwell Davies.

"By performing popular music so wonderfully, by setting such a high standard, they've set a standard for the entire industry," says Mr. Tomatz.

Beyond the special festivities of opening night — James Galway, Cleo Laine, and the premier of P.D.Q. Bach's "The 1712 [sic] Overture," discovered by Professor Schickele — a full season of celebrations will take the orchestra well beyond its hometown. A 15-city, transcontinental tour will include two free concerts: one in New York's Central Park July 8, and the other at the Lincoln Memorial July 14.

Two recent digital record albums by John Williams and the Pops for Philips are also doing extremely well on the charts. "With a Song in My Heart" features soprano Jessye Norman in favorites by Cole Porter, Jerome Kern, and George Gershwin. One cut features John Williams on piano. A second album features Prokofiev's "Peter and the Wolf," with narrator Dudley Moore.

In the 100th-anniversary year of such a successful enterprise, it is interesting to note that the Pops arose partly as an extension of the regular symphony season to keep musicians on the payroll between summer and winter seasons. As such, the BSO was 70 years ahead of its time, avoiding the crises that hit practically every US orchestra in the 1960s, when musicians clamored for year-round employment. Because of sold-out houses during the tourist season, plus recording revenue, the Pops, unlike the BSO, brings in more than its own operating costs. Both rely heavily on gifts and endowments.

Hills of western Massachusetts. (Since the local popularity of the Esplanade concerts along Boston's Charles River has grown, a second orchestra, made up of top Boston freelance musicians, plays some of the Pops's free outdoor concerts.)

Discriminating listeners wonder how much of a toll this year-round schedule, along with cabaret conditions and shortened rehearsal time, takes on Pops players.

"You have these fine musicians that are trained to play precisely with beauty and finesse told that fine nuance makes all the difference, and held very severely to that standard," says Michael Steinberg, former Boston Globe critic, now artistic director of the San Francisco Symphony. "Then suddenly for seven or eight weeks you plunge them into the bucket where nothing much makes a difference because the audience isn't listening as closely. That has to make a difference to the players."

"There will always be a place for the Pops," retorts Harry Ellis Dickson, a 48-year veteran and associate conductor of the orchestra. "Of course there are people sitting at tables eating and drinking and waitresses clanking punch bottles. But it's part of the charm of the Pops that no one is as stiff as [in] the regular season."

With all the success of the Pops, observers are asked why the formula doesn't seem to translate to other cities, other orchestras. The answers come under two broad categories, tradition and commitment.

"You have a funny collection of elements in the Boston Pops, which, from the outside, don't appear to go together," says general manager Tom Morris. "You have a world-class orchestra, with a separate conductor fully committed to make a separate repertoire work. You have one of the world's great concert halls and a cabaret setting. Somehow you put all those elements with a very broad musical repertoire and very relaxed atmosphere, and it works."

Staid Symphony Hall turns cabaret for the Pops with baubles, glitter

Though some musicians don't admit it, the 10-week Pops season is a welcome respite between the winter and summer schedules. Seventy-five concerts of more serious fare are performed in the 22-week winter subscription series. And then, after playing six nights a week as the Pops through May, June, and early July, the BSO begins the summer outdoor season at Tanglewood, in the Berkshire

Local artists display works at Lexington Museum

An obsession with the New England landscape has long been an inspiration to artists near and far. It is in this context that NEW ENGLAND: Times Two, the exhibit now hanging at the Depot Square Artists Gallery in Lexington is presented thru the media of watercolor and oil by local artists Andrea Peters of Wilmington and Evelyn Carlson of Arlington.

The watercolors of Evelyn exemplify her personal preference for the marine and country scene. Her meticulous handling of the media unmistakably catches the viewers' eye into recalling a familiar place or time.

Andrea Peters oils are painted directly from nature, capturing the spontaneity of color, light and space in a creative transition to the canvas. Her varieties of landscape and floral subjects attract the discerning eye.

The collected works of Carlson and Peters comfortably blend to make watercolor and oil a harmonious "mix."

NEW ENGLAND: Times two opens May 2 thru June 5 at the Depot Square Artists Gallery, 1837 Mass. Ave. (lower level), Lexington. Hours: Tues.-Sat. 10-5. Artists in gallery on Fridays.

Evelyn V. Carlson was born in Springfield, Mass with a natural aptitude for drawing which developed through her school years. She began painting in oils with George Dergalis at the DeCordova Museum in 1963; and in 1969 relocated to a gnawing desire to paint in watercolor, studying with George Shedd, Martin Ahearn and Ferdinand Petrie. Mrs. Carlson exhibits mainly in New England, though her paintings may be found in private collections in the United States, Canada and in Europe.

Andrea Petrers lives at four Ferguson Place in Wilmington and has many years of outstanding art achievement. She has had numerous one-person shows in the local area and has studied art both at Vesper George Art School and with numerous well known artists.

whom I admire so much over at the New Yorker. I always try to be "well-wishing."

A couple of final notes: If you're serious about writing, remember this: substance and immaculate syntax. These are crucial if you are going to make a commitment to writing. The English language is a beautiful language, and the best way to learn what good writing is all about is to read the good writing of others, like those who contribute to the New Yorker. I keep mentioning this magazine, because it is written for readers, not for, as the New Yorker describes it, "markets."

Dear Dan,

I love the way you write so humorously about what I call "the conditions of life." You have a unique ability to look at the little things in life that effect us all in a way that makes us laugh. Most of all, you're not afraid to laugh at yourself. I wish more people could have your sense of humor. Keep us chuckling, will you?

Love to Laugh

Dear Love to Laugh

I appreciate the nice comments. And I agree, we all need some humor in our lives. If I can help you and others along in that direction, then all this has been worthwhile for me. Again, thanks.

Dear Dan,

How are things? I understand you've been pretty busy, so we forgive you for not having stopped by or called lately. Everything's fine here. Just wish you could find the time to return all that Tupperware we loaned you. By the way, are you keeping up with putting the rubbish out on Wednesday mornings? We hope you're eating well, too, and remember, summer is coming, so don't let the grass get too high. Looking forward to hearing from you, maybe in person.

Mom and Dad

Dear Mom and Dad,

Sorry about not calling or stopping by. I'll make it up to you both real soon. I'll try to remember the Tupperware, too. And don't worry about food. Uncle Louis says he's got plenty of Wheaties over at his house. See you soon.

Dear Dan,

I have a bone to pick with you. You are arrogant and self-centered. You think your opinion is the only opinion. Furthermore, you're a traitor. You used to write about all those liberal ideals you believed in during the sixties and seventies. Now you're so conservative you make Bill Buckley sound like a Kennedy family spokesman. I see from your photographs that you've even cut your hair like Buckley's. What's wrong with you? Have you gone crazy? What happened to the guy I used to read who wanted to contribute something important to the national discourse? All you're good for now is training manuals on how not to remove hornet nests from under your house foundation. You sound like an Andy Rooney clone. I've decided to buy the paper just so I can use your column for my cat. That's all I've got to say, except stop writing about bees and flies and start commenting again on the problems of nuclear waste and starvation.

Fed Up in Burlington

Dear Fed Up in Burlington,

I don't know what's come over me. It must be something in the water. Perhaps now that Coors has come to Burlington, those sessions in front of the refrigerator will produce something other than pieces about bees and flies. I'm currently working on an essay exploring whether Gorbachev's name is pronounced Gore-bah-CHAWFF or Gor-BAH-chef. I'll keep you posted on when it's going to run.

Dear Dan,

I want to let you know how much I enjoyed your book. I grew up during the forties in war-torn England, and recall vividly how much movies played a part in helping me to deal with the horror of the bombs. Reading your profile on one of the actors who had such an impact on my generation was a pleasure. I understand you have a new book in the works. I'd love to read it when it comes out.

A Loyal Reader from Wakefield

Dear Loyal Reader,

I can't thank you enough for those kind words on "Best Years." Yes, I do have a new book in the works, a novel. However, I have been unable to complete it on schedule, due to other commitments. I am back to work on it now, and hope to see it published within the year. As an editor-friend of ours who also helped edit my first book once told us, writing isn't digging ditches, but it's hard work.

Dear Dan,

I can't make up my mind whether to take you seriously or not seriously. In either case, I'd like to know more about you. Do you have a favorite soap opera? What's your favorite food? Do you like to ski? Do you own a fast car? Do you like to travel? What kind of clothes do you wear? Do you have any pet peeves? Any downfalls?

Fascinated from Woburn

Dear Fascinated from Woburn,

No. Steak. No. No. Yes. Ivy League. Pushy, obnoxious people. Fast women and slow horses. And by way, you shouldn't take me seriously. Then again, maybe you should.

Nazareth Academy Honor Roll

The following is a list of students who have achieved "honors" in the third marking period at Our Lady of Nazareth Academy in Wakefield.

Lyons of Woburn.

Second honors: freshmen Stephanie Harris and Leigh Graham, both of Wakefield; sophomore Kristin Vitti of Wakefield; and junior Laura Senier of Reading.

Third honors: freshmen

Krista Bardol of Reading, Lisa Camilleri of Stoneham, Diane Hurlley of Woburn, and Jodi Pettazzoni of Lynnfield; sophomores Dawn Deignan and Jodie DiCorato, both of Stoneham; and junior Cathleen Morgan of Wakefield.

Spring comes to the hill country in Texas

By DANIEL D. KENNEDY

NEW BIELAU, Texas — Spring comes early to the hill country of east central Texas. By late February or early March, orange Indian paintbrushes and violet bluebonnets are poking up through the muddy black soil.

Cows are giving birth to calves — an idyllic scene that inspires little romanticism among the ranchers, who know they will have to sell the young animals to slaughterhouses six to eight months hence.

Budding trees and a warm spring breeze bring a touch of softness to a hard land and smiles to the faces of people who are kind and generous, but who have learned to value toughness and a willingness to work above all other qualities.

This is not the Texas of "Dallas." There are no oil barons here, and although there are plenty of ranchers, they are not rich.

New Bielau isn't even a town. Rather, it is a settlement of a few hundred people off Interstate 10. It is five miles to Weimar, the nearest city (population 2,008), a community of low, flat houses, small, neatly kept yards, and wide streets. The center is dotted with banks, a pharmacy and several general stores and meat markets.

The ranches of Texas would ordinarily be the last place two young suburbanites from the Northeast such as my wife and me would get a chance to know. But after two week-long visits to my aunt and uncle's farm, we have an understanding of and an appreciation for a way of life we had scarcely known existed.

Weimar and other nearby small cities fill most of the day-to-day needs of the farming area. The big cities — Houston to the east, San Antonio to the west and Austin to the north — are about 100 miles away.

The residents, mostly descendants of German and Slavic immigrants, live in one-story ranch houses and farmhouses. Their homes are propped up on cinderblocks to keep them dry from the mud and the occasional spring floods. The interiors are heated by propane and cooled by ceiling fans.

Diversions here may sound dull to New Englanders, but they help break the monotony of farm life. People drop in at the Weimar Country Inn on Sundays after church for the all-you-can-eat buffet. The Weimar Mercury features police news written by the county sheriffs and dispatches sent in by farm wives from New Bielau and other outlying parts of Colorado County. Ranchers catch bass in their artificial ponds, which they call "tanks."

The area even has a touch of notoriety — La Grange, about 20 miles away, is the home of the former house of ill repute on which "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" was based.

Most of the ranchers and dairy farmers are old. Farming is a difficult life of 18-hour days, loneliness and limited financial reward. The younger generation, for the most part, wants nothing to do with it.

So people in their 20s and 30s work in the stores or the factory in Weimar or move away to Houston, Dallas or another part of the country.

Nowhere can this aging process be better seen than in the Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Church, a small chapel off the county road that leads into Weimar.

It is a bright Sunday morning, but there is a chill in the air. The men of the church light propane heaters as the organist begins her prelude.

As the Rev. Mr. Dean, the pastor, walks to the podium, there are no more than 25 to 30 people in the room — most of them in their 60s, 70s and 80s.

Rev. Dean, who is about 40 years old, reaches out enthusiastically to a mother with a child and to a young couple with a baby. They are the future of the community, but they are outnumbered by the past.

The isolation in which the people live, and the ways they meet their daily needs — digging their own water wells and cesspools, bartering for meat and milk, helping each other build their houses and barns — has led to a fierce independence and a disdain of outsiders.

You can't help but admire their self-reliance, but that quality only emphasizes the differences between East and West and makes it that much harder for a New England suburbanite to fit in.

In Greater Boston, most of us take care of our material wants by working in one specialized area — plumbing, medicine, law, teaching, carpentry — whatever. We take the money we earn and use it to buy the services of other specialists. That leads most of us to have only a dim understanding of how are basic needs are met — where our food comes from, how our water gets to us, even how our toilet works.

It is intimidating to suddenly find yourself surrounded by people who can take care of

East Texas hill country

most of their needs without leaving their farms, who seem to know a little bit about everything, and who don't mind showing off in front of a couple of city slickers from back East.

It is customary to end an article such as this by saying that these ranchers, once you get to know them, are just like you and me. I'm not going to do that, and I wonder whether other writers do so out of a sense of obligation or an inability to avoid the common cliché.

The people of the hill country are very different from you and me. They would be no happier commuting to a 9-to-5 job than we would be pitching hay at 5 a.m. They find it difficult to understand why anyone would want to spend an evening in the city, go running for relaxation or vote for a Democrat. They scratch their heads when you tell them you lock your car in your own yard and that you eat out two or three nights a week because neither of you has time to cook.

Those differences in pace, tastes and life style, combined with their friendliness and typical Texas penchant for storytelling, are what makes knowing them enjoyable and rewarding.

VA increases home loan interest rates

The Veterans Administration has increased its maximum home loan interest rate - from 12 1/2 percent to 13 percent, effective March 25, 1985.

The last change in the interest rate occurred on November 21, 1984 when it was decreased from 13 percent to 12 1/2 percent.

VA Administrator Harry N. Walters said the increase in the maximum rate was made necessary by current mortgage market conditions.

The VA action also increased by one-half percentage point the maximum rates for graduated payment mortgages (GPM's) to 13 1/4 percent and home improvement loans were also increased. The new maximum rates are 15 1/2 percent for unit-only loans and 15 percent for a loan to purchase either a unit with the lot or for loans to purchase a lot on which a unit already owned by the veteran is to be placed.

The rate change does not affect existing loans, whose interest rate remains the same for the life of the agreement.

VA home loans can be used to purchase, construct, alter, improve, repair or refinance a home. This includes the purchase of condominiums and mobile homes, with or without a lot.

Winchester Players to present comedy

"What the Butler Saw", by Joe Orton, a British comedy in the style of Benny Hill, will be presented by the Winchester Players on May 3, 4, 10 and 11 at 8:15 PM in the Metcalf Hall Theatre, The Winchester Unitarian Church, corner of Main St. and Mystic Valley Parkway, Winchester. For ticket information and reservations, call the Players answering service at 721-1702.

'Fiddler on the Roof' features local residents

The North Reading Theatre Workshop's upcoming spring production of "Fiddler on the Roof" casts many local residents in featured roles. From Reading hail Eddie Dee as Motel, the very shy but rather amorous tailor who finally gets up the courage to wed Tevye's oldest daughter, and Debi Ham as Grandma Tzeitel, the grandmother come back from the dead to halt her granddaughter's proposed marriage. Bob Slack, Woburn, is back with the N.R.T.W. in the role of Perchik, the studious, but rebellious free-thinker. Deirdre Greene, North Reading, has been cast as Chava, Tevye's middle daughter who defies tradition by marrying out of the faith; John Greene, also of North Reading, portrays Reb Mordcha, the inn-keeper who's primary job is to provide schnapps and a gossipy respite to the townsmen; and Heather Wood of North Reading will play Tevye's youngest fifth daughter.

Other locals appearing in the chorus include Nancy Sawyer, Reading; Helen Greene, Joleen Ham, Brianne Wood, Darin MacLeod, Betsy Coutiere, Aaron Greene, and Karl Schumaker, all of North Reading; Pamela Wood, Marlene Mitchell, and Charlene Spina, Wakefield; Cindy Hoffman, Middleton; Nicki Nicolosi, Andover; and David Besse, Woburn.

Directed and produced by Paul D. Greene of Andover, "Fiddler" will be presented on Saturday and Sunday, May 4 and 5, and Friday and Saturday, May 10 and 11. All performances are at North Reading High School and have an 8:00 curtain.

REHEARSING THE PARTS — Reading residents Nancy Sawyer, Edward Dee and Debi Ham will appear when the North Reading Theatre Workshop presents "Fiddler on the Roof," on Saturday and Sunday, May 4, 5, 10 and 11 at the North Reading High School. All performances begin at 8 p.m., with a 3 p.m. matinee on Sunday. Seating is reserved; for tickets and information call the Greens, 24 Haverhill St., North Reading, at 664-3949.

In our Nursing Dept. we currently have 12-hour weekend positions which pay 1 1/2 times base wage. Additionally, our new wage scale allows us to offer a starting rate for new staff which gives credit for prior experience in health care.
